1. There is a dirt road between Kushka (N35-16, E62-17) and Margonovka (N35-17, E62-20), which is seven kilometers east of Kushka. The road has three lanes and can be used by heavy truck traffic, except when it rains.
2. From Margonovka to Chaymen i Bed (N35-27, E62-24) the road is similar to the one from Kushka to Margonovka.
3. From Chaymen i Bed to Kalai Mor (N35-39, E62-35), which is 60 kilometers from Kushka, the road and travel conditions are similar to the roads previously mentioned, except that the road is gravel-topped in some sections.
4. Eastward from Kalai Mor the road is merely a trail, but it can be travelled in rainy weather.

25X1

5. The main road leading north from Kalai Mor to Tashkepristroy (approximately N35-60, E62-40) is better than any of the roads mentioned previously. The road, which has a gravel surface, is wide enough to permit two-lane traffic.

25X1

6. [redacted] the road from Kushka to Mary (N37-36, E61-50), is a distance of 300 kilometers. [redacted] it is a gravel road, and is kept in good condition. Reasonable speeds can be maintained while driving on this road.

1. Border Guard units are broken down in the following fashion:

- a. At the top of the structural division is the military district.
- b. Under the authority of the military district is the detachment, which has a complement of from 300 to 350 men.
- c. Subservient to the detachment is the command, which has a strength of from 70 to 80 men. This includes the 51 men who make up the administrative and staff personnel of the command itself. Four commands comprise a detachment.
- d. Under the command is the frontier post, which has a listed strength of 51. A frontier post generally has about 46 enlisted men, among whom are one senior sergeant, four or five sergeants, and an assistant to the senior sergeant. The remaining personnel are officers, of either the first or second category. The difference between the officer categories is that a first category officer is qualified as a political officer, and gives political lectures at the frontier post. A post commanded by an officer of the first category will be headed by three officers; if commanded by a second category officer, the post will be headed by two officers.

2. The pay rates of border guards and officers are:

- a. A private in his first year of duty receives 30 rubles a month.
- b. A private with two years of service receives 50 rubles a month.
- c. A sergeant without a specialty receives 50 rubles a month.
- d. A sergeant with a specialty receives 150 rubles a month.

- e. A chief of a frontier post receives 1,500 rubles a month.
- f. A commandant receives 2,800 to 3,000 rubles a month.
- 3. Border guards receive political lectures nightly, which last from two to three hours; political lectures are given during the day on Mondays and Fridays. Guards receive about one month of leave a year. If sentenced to the guardhouse for disciplinary punishment, inmates are fed bread and water every other day. Border guards are required to be Communist Party members, or to apply for membership in the party. Guards who are too young to belong to the party are required to be members of the Komsomol.
- 4. Border guard training includes courses in horsemanship, life in the desert, tracking, communications, and the maintenance of communications. One such training installation is located at Mary (N37-35, E61-50), where there is also a school for border guard senior sergeants. Those draftees born in 1928, who were called up for service in 1948 and sent into the border guard service, were trained at the school at Mary.
- 5. [redacted] the depth of the area for which the border guards are responsible, [redacted] is rather wide since patrols were sent at great distances from the border toward the interior of the USSR.
- 6. The "Secret Section" of the frontier troops interrogates Turkmen, or other indigenous people living in the frontier area, who are caught smuggling or otherwise evading laws.
